Statement of Significance: Located on Bringelly Road, St. Phillip's Anglican Church completed in 1898 is a landmark in the local area and now represents the principal focus for defining the centre of Kingswood. The church demonstrates the onset of village development at Kingswood following suburban subdivision of the 1880s. The church is a good example of a modest church of its era and the earliest of the extant churches in Kingswood.

Historical Notes or Provenance: In 1897 four blocks of Crown land were donated to the residents of Kingswood for a church and cemetery (later not required due to the dedication of Penrith General Cemetery). The church was completed in 1898, the contractor was Jack Melville with ironwork provided by local blacksmith James Wainwright. The western porch was added later. Opened in 1898, the church was not consecrated until 1959. A new Sunday school hall was completed in 1958 (now demolished).

Physical Description: The item is the church of St. Phillip's Anglican Church on the corner of Bringelly Road and Second Avenue. The church is a modest late-Victorian Gothic Revival building constructed in brick comprising a nave, chancel, and porch. The side walls have a pair of simple buttresses and other architectural embellishments are rendered window sills and voussiors. The roof is gabled and sheeted in Colorbond corrugated metal. The windows are simple timber framed box frame sashes except for a lancet window in the front porch. The structure has been reinforced with wrought iron stay ties. The grounds contain a remnant stand of Eucalypt to the rear of the lot. The church hall at the rear of the church was being redeveloped at the time of the inspection.
